Case Study: ASC-WDS and the London ADASS workforce reports

Overview

We recently partnered with London ADASS to share ASC-WDS data to support their local intelligence. London ADASS are working with the London School of Economics to create some workforce reports, bringing together data from ASC-WDS and other sources. This will enable holistic analysis and informed decision-making on workforce across the region.

They will conduct econometric analysis of the relationship between workforce characteristics of providers and quality of service provision. The availability of these reports ensures local authority commissioners have access to as much information as possible and can see the relationships between different metrics to make informed commissioning decisions
